Ref.: Objetivos y sinopsis de la conferencia

Estamos dichosos de saber que estarán con nosotros para hablar acerca de los éxitos y desafíos del ejercicio del derecho a la información alrededor del mundo, y sobre todo para analizar de qué forma podemos promover este derecho. La conferencia estará dirigida por Jimmy Carter, Ex Presidente de los Estados Unidos. Contaremos además con la presencia de dos jefes de estado, Evo Morales, actual Presidente de Bolivia, y Amadou Toumani Touré, actual presidente de Mali, como también con Alejandro Toledo, Ex Presidente del Perú. Nos sentimos satisfechos de contar con tan alto nivel de representación de todos los sectores de la sociedad –el político, el gubernamental, el empresarial, el de los medios de comunicación, el de las organizaciones no gubernamentales, como también el de las organizaciones internacionales y las fundaciones más prominentes–. En total tendremos 125 participantes provenientes de 40 países.

Antecedentes

El Centro Carter celebró una conferencia preparatoria en mayo de 2007 que sirvió para identificar los temas centrales de esta conferencia y esclarecer sus objetivos. Durante la fase u

e el proceso se estanque o retroceda.<sup>1</sup> Si bien es cierto que ha habido

<sup>1</sup> En los Estados Unidos, el gobierno Bush ha llevado a cabo una serie de ataques contra la Ley para el Libre Acceso a la Información (“Freedom of Information Act”), como por ejemplo memorandos enviados por el Departamento de Justicia instando a mantener las cosas en secreto, o el hecho de que el vicepresidente Cheney declare que él no hace parte de la rama ejecutiva y que por ende avances claros, particularmente en el número de países que ha promulgado leyes integrales de acceso a la información, es probable que no se haya mirado realmente cómo les está yendo a estas leyes en la práctica, y en qué medida se están implementando, haciendo cumplir y utilizando.

Además, no se sabe si los beneficios del derecho a la información están alcanzando a los más desfavorecidos y creando las transformaciones sociales esperadas. Aunque el derecho a la información tiene el potencial de ser un fuerte mecanismo para garantizar la responsabilidad y promover el desarrollo, existe un consenso en torno a la necesidad de llevar a cabo investigaciones minuciosas que demuestren el efecto del derecho a la información para así poder persuadir a los gobiernos de que en general, los beneficios de la transparencia sobrepasan los costos de seguir en la opacidad.

Meta y objetivos:

La meta de esta conferencia internacional es avanzar en el desarrollo de sistemas efectivos de acceso a la información pública en todo el mundo.

Los objetivos principales de la conferencia son:

1. Reflexionar acerca del estado actual del derecho a la información pública en el mundo
2. Considerar el efecto del acceso a la información en áreas como el desarrollo y la gobernación
3. Explorar las acciones prioritarias para promover la promulgación y total implementación de leyes de acceso a la información pública, sin olvidar las consideraciones de realpolitik que influyen a todas las partes interesadas

Esto se logrará mediante los presentadores principales, las exposiciones de cada panel, los grupos de trabajo y las discusiones plenarias. Al reunir a tan ilustre grupo de pensadores, personas influyentes y practicantes en un contexto informal, esperamos poder crear un espacio para el logro de esta meta. Los participantes harán recomendaciones detalladas y delinearán un plan de acción para promover el derecho a la información alrededor del mundo al cierre de la conferencia.

Metodología

Exceptuando las sesiones plenarias iniciales y las conclusiones del último día, llevaremos a cabo nuestras deliberaciones a puerta cerrada y de manera extraoficial para así crear un ambiente en el que todos los presentes puedan expresar sus opiniones e ideas con tranquilidad. Tampoco tendremos discursos ni actuaciones formales. Los presentadores del almuerzo y la cena y las plenarias iniciales del miércoles en la tarde proporcionarán el contexto de las deliberaciones a través de presentaciones muy cortas cuyo objetivo será el de estimular un debate sensato. Confirmaremos el resumen o la declaración de la conferencia durante la sesión de clausura.

El jueves nos dividiremos en cinco grupos de trabajo para analizar los problemas específicos que se identificaron en una reunión preparatoria que tuvimos en mayo del 2007 y durante innumerables consultas con muchos de ustedes. El objetivo de cada uno de los grupos de trabajo es el de proponer recomendaciones de cómo proceder. Les pedimos que consideren diferentes pasos a seguir con base en las distintas partes interesadas –¿qué es lo que pueden hacer todos y cada uno de los actores: la sociedad civil, el gobierno nacional, las organizaciones internacionales, el sector privado, los medios de comunicación, los académicos, y las instituciones financieras y los donantes internacionales? Todos somos iguales en estos pequeños grupos de trabajo, en los que contaremos con los mejores y más comprometidos expertos y practicantes de todo el mundo en el área del derecho a la información. Sus facilitadores y relatores son los mejores en el campo, y ellos nos ayudarán a lo largo del día para que produzcamos recomendaciones claras.

El viernes en la mañana nos reuniremos en un solo grupo para hablar acerca de nuestras conclusiones y recomendaciones, las cuales pasarán a hacer parte del plan de acción que quedará

Pautas para los grupos de trabajo

Metodología

El segundo día de la conferencia, el jueves 28 de febrero, estará dedicado a los grupos de trabajo. Cada grupo de trabajo contará con un facilitador y un relator que ayudarán a dirigir las discusiones del grupo y llevar un registro de las mismas. El objetivo para la mañana y las primeras horas de la tarde de este día será el de analizar los problemas, las lecciones aprendidas, los éxitos, y los desafíos pertinentes al grupo. El resumen y la identificación de los pasos a seguir para avanzar en el tema del derecho a la información se llevarán a cabo al finalizar el día. Todos los grupos contarán con un formato de tres diapositivas en Power Point para presentar lo siguiente:

1. La determinación del tema
2. Las consideraciones
3. Qué hacer/Pasos a seguir

El facilitador del grupo les presentará el trabajo en Power Point al Presidente Carter y a todos los participantes en la conferencia para fomentar la discusión de la plenaria el viernes 29 de febrero. El arduo trabajo y las intensas discusiones de los grupos, las diapositivas presentadas y las discusiones finales de los grupos se integrarán en la declaración de la conferencia que además incluirá un plan de acción específico para avanzar en el desarrollo del derecho a la información pública a nivel internacional.

Configuración de los grupos

La designación de los grupos se decidió cuidadosamente con base en los siguientes criterios:

1. Preferencias individuales sobre los distintos grupos de trabajo
2. La intención de fomentar la unión del grupo

Por esto, es indispensable que todos y cada uno de los miembros del grupo permanezcan con el grupo de trabajo al que fueron asignados. Por favor no cambie de grupo de trabajo bajo ningún motivo. Nos disculpamos con anterioridad si no pudimos asignarlo según sus preferencias iniciales.
